"We are excited to name the appropriately named, Sean Valentine, to officiate at the Farmers Dream Wedding on the 'Love Float'," said Mike Linton, Enterprise Chief Marketing Officer for Farmers Insurance. "Farmers Insurance understands that getting married is a major life change and we are extremely pleased to support Nicole and Gerald as they become newlyweds."

Farmers Insurance stands by its customers in some of the most important life moments each and every day, from buying and insuring a home, to having a baby and purchasing life insurance, to helping soldiers returning from overseas and working with survivors of natural disasters and hardships. Getting married is a major life event, and Farmers Insurance is there to support newlyweds like Nicole and Gerald in many ways.

"The Tournament of Roses Parade is a national tradition, born in Southern California. I can't think of a more exciting way to celebrate that tradition than by officiating a live wedding atop the Farmers Insurance Love Float," said Valentine. "I am honored to be a part of Nicole and Gerald's special day and to help them plan for their lives together."

Nicole and Gerald captured the hearts of the American public and won their votes during the Farmers Insurance Dream Wedding Contest with their fated love story in which the former high school classmates reconnected later in life to find true love together.

Join in the wedding celebrations and toast the couple by tweeting to @WeAreFarmers and @GeraldandNicole with hashtag #FarmersLoveFloat. Also visit www.Farmers.com/LoveFloat to learn more about the Dream Wedding and check local broadcast listings to tune in and watch the live nuptials on "The Love Float." Valentine's show is nationally syndicated and airs daily in Los Angeles on 104.3 MYfm.
