Severe Weather Moves through Southeastern States

Farmers Insurance Prepared to Help Customers and Monitoring for more Severe Weather

LOS ANGELES, March 22, 2017 /PRNewswire/ -- Severe weather moved through parts ofTennessee, Georgia and South Carolina overnight. High winds and hail caused damage to homes in these states, and at least one life was lost in Georgia. Farmers Insurance® catastrophe claims representatives, agents, other personnel and resources are engaged and prepared to help customers who suffered damage.

Farmers Insurance Head of Claims Customer experiencePaul Quinn emphasized that additional staff are being deployed to assist in these areas. Quinn also notes that customers in Midwest and Southern states should prepare themselves for upcoming severe weather this week.

Farmers Insurance Seasonal Smarts Digest provides safety and preparedness tips for homeowners all over the country. Quinn urges customers who are expecting severe weather to take time to prepare their homes and their families for potential winds, hail and tornadoes, having emergency supplies and plans in place, and keeping a close eye on upcoming weather.

Farmers® customers who have damage from the storms can call their agent or the 24-hour claims center for assistance.
